El Cerrito's jazz band: kids to be proud of

Reviewing a happy evening

By GORDON RADDUE

EL CERRITO — Fresh from a near first-place finish at the 13th annual California High School Jazz Band Competition in Monterey, Charles Lord's El Cerrito High School Jazz Ensemble was received like a world champion at its final performance of the year.

Arts

The co-educational group (four very talented young women are in its ranks) reaped a well-deserved standing ovation at a May 25 concert in the school's Little Theater which also included a characteristically strong performance by the Vocal Jazz Ensemble, directed by Richard Gray.

And Mayor Jean Siri providing the Jazz Ensemble with official recognition by presenting it with a City Council proclamation proclaiming May 25 as "El Cerrito Jazz Ensemble Day."

Outstanding jazz ensembles are an El Cerrito High tradition that goes well back into the 1960s, but this present one may be the best of them all. Others may have been as well or better blessed with all-around talent, but this one bows to none in unity of purpose and dedication to the art.

Due to the current five-subject day, several members of the band receive no credit for participation in the program, which involves showing up at 7:30 a.m. for rehearsals.

But Lord, in his 31st year as a music teacher in the district, is a director who knows how to get the most out of his material. And this band has the support of a parents' group that is concerned not only about what is happening musically at El Cerrito High School but in the Richmond Unified School District as a whole.

After having the satisfaction of seeing his son, lead trumpeter Darren Miner, receive the coveted "most outstanding senior jazz band member" award, parents' group leader Bill Miner chaired a post-concert meeting of district teachers and parents to mobilize support for all of the arts programs in all of the schools.

Judging from the response, these people mean business. And judging from the quality of music heard earlier in the Little Theater, their cause is an eminently just one.

In a district that once had six ex-

School band takes high state honors

The Charles Lord-directed El Cerrito High School Jazz Ensemble fell just a half-point short of winning the 13th annual California High School Jazz Band Competition in a blanket finish with repeating champion Aptos and Berkeley May 20 in Monterey.

Tenor saxophonist Ken Brooks made the California High School All-Star Jazz Band which will play at September's Monterey Jazz Festival, sponsor of the competition.

Brooks and drummer Wilson Brooks earned $1000 scholarships to the Berklee School of Music in Boston. Lead trumpeter Darren Miner won a $750 scholarship to the Dick Grove Workshop in Studio City.

Wilson, voted outstanding drummer at the competition, and bass trombonist Steve Ulrich were named all-star alternates.

The school's symphonic and concert bands, respectively directed by Terry Clark and Richard Gray, will present a joint concert at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the school cafeteria. Admission is $2.

Legal aid: more cases, fewer bucks

County is unable to keep up

By JON BASHOR

Budget cuts and current policies aimed at reducing the nation's welfare burden have put increasing strains on Contra Costa's Legal Services Foundation.

The result, says foundation director Mark Goldowitz, is a legal aid program that concentrates on "matters of survival" and leaves West County's poor to fend for themselves in other legal disputes.

Because of a $125,000 budget cut in 1982 that forced the Contra Costa office to lay off four attorneys and close one of its offices, the foundation has found itself unable to keep up with the demand for free legal aid.

At the same time the office was laying off attorneys, the number of people on welfare rolls increased, despite stricter eligibility standards and state and federal efforts to reduce the number of recipients.

"We're only able to meet a small portion of all the needs," Goldowitz said. "We used to do the entire range of civil legal problems, but now we just do survival cases."

Because of budget cuts, Goldowitz said his staff of 10 attorneys now accepts only critical cases, such as those dealing with evictions or loss of government benefits.

This year, Goldowitz said, he expects his office will receive $467,000 in federal money — 95 percent of its budget. This would restore the local budget to about 70 percent of its 1981 level, after accounting for inflation.

"The good news is this gives us money to continue addressing problems of poor people in the county," Goldowitz says.

"The bad news is the number of poor and unemployed who need help has increased because of the policies of the current administration."

RUSD mulls high school closure

By BARBARA ERICKSON

The Richmond Unified school board, which closed five elementary schools and set up four basic sites this year, is now looking at sweeping changes in the district's high schools.

The board agreed last Wednesday to form a secondary school closure committee, a first step toward revamping the high school program. The group will consider closing a school, setting up magnet schools, creating one school for the "academically interested," setting homework standards, and, possibly, building another school near Hercules.

The board voted after hearing a staff response to a report made in February by the Academic Curriculum Committee. The panel had formed to find ways the district could compensate for the loss of the sixth period in most of the secondary grades.

The staff rejected the committee's suggestions for in-service training, extended days, and staff assignments on grounds they conflict with union contracts, are too expensive, or are already in effect in some form.

But the secondary school closure committee will take up some of the recommendations included in the panel's report — academic programs and the possibility of closing a site. The report suggested shutting down Harry Ells High School, which has only 900 students.

"How we improve the secondary system is perhaps the chief issue," said board member Frank Calton. He said the district should look at three different models for the high schools. They would include:

• Creating one or more sites for the "academically interested," those students who are serious about studies and not necessarily advanced in academic subjects. This plan, origi-

Albany plans a big 75th bash

Who has lived in Albany for the longest time?

Is there anyone born in Albany or to parents living in Albany on Sept. 21, 1908, the date of Albany's incorporation?

Do you have an authentic costume representing your nationality? Would you be willing to demonstrate how to make authentic food popular in that country? Do you know folk dances representing your nationality?

In a brainstorming session May 24 at Albany Senior Center, the mayor's 75th anniversary celebration committee came up with many ideas to make the Diamond Jubilee Celebration in September a colorful event.

The first activity will be a birthday poster project for school children. Kay Rabin reported that her committee, which includes Dario Meniketti and Carla Tenret, will ask children to present their designs on pre-printed posters. The deadline for posters is Aug. 1, after which they will be given to merchants for window displays.

Fern Luoma, who chairs the anniversary committee, asked representatives of each organization to report what the group might contribute to the celebration.

Representatives from First Baptist Church of Albany said their church will observe its 75th anniversary on Sept. 11 this year and members plan to join in the citywide celebration.

The next meeting of the committee will be at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 7, at Albany Senior Center. Groups wishing to join in planning the Diamond Jubilee of Albany are invited to send representatives and make reservations by calling the Chamber of Commerce, 525-1771.

County system suffers cuts

The biggest blow came in Reagan's 1982 budget. The budget of the Legal Services Corporation in Washington was cut 25 percent, from $321 million to $241 million. The cuts trickled down to the local level, reducing the Richmond budget to $375,000, from $500,000.

Four attorneys and three staff workers had to be laid off. An office in Pittsburg was closed.

Attorney Philip Bertenthal says this means that clients are often turned down even when they have a strong case.

Family disputes over child custody and divorce make up half of the requests for help coming into the legal aid office. Now, Goldowitz said, the callers are referred elsewhere.

Incidents in which customers believe they were cheated by merchants or were improperly denied credit are also turned down.

In 1982, Goldowitz said his staff filed cases for 1,362 clients. Another 10,033 clients were given legal advice, information or referred to another agency.

In 1981, before the cuts hit hardest, 1,942 cases were prepared and 8,815 people were given advice or referred elsewhere. The Contra Costa Bar Association, for instance, operates a lawyer referral service. The low-cost service provides a half-hour of legal advice for $15.

"But some people just can't afford that," Goldowitz said.

In addition, he said, "it may be hard to get a case accepted (by the lawyer) — especially if it's a difficult one and would take a lot of time."

All this comes at a time when the number of welfare recipients in the state is approaching record levels, despite more stringent screening and tighter eligibility rules.

In Contra Costa, 12,228 families received federally-funded Aid to Families with Dependent Children in March of this year. Another 3,159 people received General Assistance payments from the county.

In all, more than 32,000 county residents were on some form of "income maintenance" provided by the government.

Three years ago, 12,087 families received AFDC and 1,957 were on General Assistance.

The total number of welfare cases in March 1980 was 30,207.

"It's harder to get on," agreed Herb Putnam, a director in the county Social Services Department.

For both recipients and new applicants, "the rules are tighter and tougher," he said.

For example, Putnam said, a change implemented in December 1980 eliminated 496 families from the program.

Legal Aid's Bertenthal said such decisions may not take human factors into consideration.

"The decisions are difficult to make and are made on paper," Bertenthal said.

"But often it's overkill, and it increases our case load dramatically."

To make matters worse, legal aid attorney Ellen Tabachnick said, clients taken off the rolls are directed to legal assistance, should they wish to appeal the decision.

Furthermore, the successful rate of appeals, shows the decisions are often made arbitrarily, Bertenthal said.

"Two-thirds of the people who appeal their cases win," he said.

The refusal by Congress to eliminate legal aid, however, and the publicity surrounding the plight of the poor during hard economic times — are signs that the needy will not be abandoned, Goldowitz said. He predicts more private attorneys will begin donating their services to the poor.

"I think what's ahead is increased public awareness of the injustices to poor people," he said, "as well as the need to correct them."

ceptionally good high school jazz ensembles (Richmond High School won the 1975 Monterey competition and played at that year's Monterey Jazz Festival), only two now qualify as such — El Cerrito and Pinole Valley, where director Alan Close has the program on the upgrade.

El Cerrito's immediate jazz future looks rosy; only four of the present ensemble members are graduating seniors. But the "feeder" program at Portola, which Lord also directs, is running out of musicians due to lower-level cutbacks in the schools.

The excellence of the joint concert underscored the treasures that will be lost if the district's music program goes under.

The jazz ensemble was magnificent, from the sprightly performance of Don Schamber's "Meet Freddie Fud" that opened the program to a breathtaking finale on Les Hooper's "Fast Forward," which showcased the brilliant drumming of junior Wilson Brooks and one of several distinguished solos by another returnee, tenor saxophonist Ken Brooks.

Alto saxophonist Jackie LaPointe and trombonist Mara Fox both provided strong and firm leadership of their respective sections, and will continue to do so next fall. Miner's fine first-chair trumpet will be missed, but perhaps not for long, what with such able players as Greg Ormeo, Scott Jensen, Susan White and Dan Lidicker returning.

Ormeo and Jensen both contributed fine solos that fit neatly into the context of the sparklingly well-played arrangements, as did bass trombonist Steve Ulrich, who with bassist Chris Fure may be the hardest to replace of the graduating seniors.

The other senior, second altoist Mark Jensen, will leave a substantial gap in the saxophone section, but returnee Glen Mukai is strong on both tenor and alto saxes (he also plays first clarinet in the San Francisco Symphony Youth Orchestra!).

Pianist Angel Rife, trombonist Dan Crawford and guitarist Chris Moorhead are the other band members Lord will be very happy to greet again in the fall.

nally suggested by Kennedy High forensics coach David Dansky, would create another site for students with behavior and attendance problems, a kind of expanded continuation school.

- Keep the present system of comprehensive schools (those which offer a complete curriculum) and concentrate on strengthening the curriculum and instruction.
- Create a magnet school with a different emphasis at each site, academics at one, music at another, and so on. The district would then allow open enrollment at the high school level.

"I don't know which of the three might be better," said Calton, "but we need good people to advise us. We need to get truckin' on it."

Board president Katherine Lord said the the high schools should notify students at each site about the different courses available. Some schools offer classes that others do not have, she said, and students should be able to transfer for the subjects they want.

The board then voted 4-1 to form the secondary closure committee. Goy Fuller, who has opposed setting up review committees, dissented.

Calton said later he hopes the committee will also look at the need for a high school near Hercules.

Football player became education pro

Sylvester Greenwood chose a life with kids

By STEVE TADY

EL CERRITO — Easing back in his chair and surveying a spectacular view of the Bay Area, Portola Junior High vice principal Sylvester Greenwood drifted back to his days as a pro football player.

"You know, I was nothing but a piece of meat. They wanted to put the best player on the field. They weren't interested in what was best for me," he said.

"They" were the New Orleans Saints and it sounds as Greenwood has bitter feelings toward the career that consumed parts of three seasons.

"Not at all, I'm not bitter," he says. "The average fan in the stands just doesn't realize that football is a business. I didn't realize it either. But it hit me pretty fast when I got injured."

A severe knee injury cut short Greenwoood's career. He was rushing the Minnesota Viking quarterback in the middle of the 1968 season and got blind-sided by a wide receiver. "I couldn't even see him. Bang, the knee was gone."

So what happened? Another ex-pro player's life shattered because he only learned one thing in college — football? Not Greenwood.

He had not then finished his college degree and was counting on playing football a few more years. So hewent back to school to finish his degree and has been an educator in West County ever since.

The story of Sylvester Greenwood is unusual. He went from rags to football riches, back to rags and riches again.

At 6-foot-3 and 270 pounds, Greenwood is imposing. He's also articulate and thoughtful.

"I knew I wanted to be a teacher. I sort of planned for it. When I realized that I wasn't going to play anymore, I went right back to San Francisco State to get my degree," he explained.

Another reason why Greenwood was so ready for life outside football is that he never thought he would be on the middle of pro football.

Born in Arkansas, he and his family moved west when Greenwood was a year old. He went to Harry Ells High in Richmond where he was a 6-1, 192 pound defensive back. He must have frightened several running backs in 1962, being perhaps the largest and fastest high school defensive back around.

His high school football prowess landed him some scholarship offers, but most of them came from out-of-state and he decided on San Francisco State for one year.

He started at defensive back for the freshman team but because of work, his grades began to suffer and he was forced back to Contra Costa College. At CCC, his career began to blossom as he gained weight but remained fast.

A scholarship from Fresno State was next. "When I got down there, I looked around and all I saw were orchards. I couldn't believe it. I started to come back to the Bay Area, but I decided to try it for a year," he said.

The next two years turned out to be what he called the best two years of my life."

The first year was supposed to be the emergence of the great Greenwood. He was the big man on campus and he knew it. "I was supposed to come in and tear the league up. But I had gained some weight and I wasn't doing my best, the coaches knew it and I knew it. They said I was loafing."

He was shocked to learn that the Fresno coach didn't want him back for spring practice because he was too fat. "I was at 265 now and they didn't even want to see me unless I dropped a few pounds," he said.

That next summer, Greenwood worked out feverishly at the Oakland YMCA, got down to 218, shaved his head and went back to shock the campus.

"I went in to get my equipment and the equipment manager didn't even recognize me. He asked me who I was. Nobody recognized me."

The rest of the league would recognize Greenwood in a hurry. He became a starter at defensive end and began to record sack after sack.

He was presented with several honors after the season but he still felt that he wasn't pro football material. And his thoughts were confirmed when he was not drafted.

But the Saints invited him to camp and when they realized how fast he was, they kept him. This time, he was advised to bulk up and that was easy.

Then, the reality of the situation set in. "We were eating in the best places, staying in the finest hotels, everything was first class. I had more money than I had ever had in my life and I was seeing places I would not have been able to see," he said.

But just as quickly, a promising career ended in a tangled mass of ruined knee tissue.

He brought the knee back strong while working on weight machines and got a tryout with the Cincinnati Bengals. He thought he was doing everything right, but the next thing he knew, he was on waivers. There was only one place to go.

"I had to get back home, deep inside, I knew it was over. I took the next plane out of there."

He had made $12,000 his rookie year, $15,000 his second year and $18,000 in his last year. But now he had to start all over. There would be no panic from Sylvester Greenwood.

"I got a job working as a security guard and I knew I wanted to be a teacher. I finished school at SF State and worked as a teacher during the summer," he said.

His first job was at Harry Ells, were he helped coach the 1975 state track champions. He then was a dean at De Anza High before coming to Portola.

"He is very dependable and very sincere. He has a great rapport with students. If you would see him out in the halls with kids you would know how much he loves kids," says Portola principal Rosemary Furlong.

Greenwood's responsibilities include orienting substitute teachers and sometimes even being a substitute. He helps plan the curriculum and arranges testing schedules. On lunch periods, he stands in the yard and makes sure there are no problems. There aren't.

California public schools are having problems and Greenwood doesn't like it.

"What they want is quality education, but they won't pay for it," Greenwood said. The society is built on education and it's the last thing considered. Think about it. Teachers make about $12,000 a year to start but guys who have no education can make $24,000 a year to start driving a bus. It's sad, there is no consistency."

Neighbors object to new motel

By CATHERINE SCHUTZ

The developer of a 19-unit motel on Carlson Boulevard that has raised the hackles of the neighborhood says he is building a first-class facility "that your parents and friends can stay in."

The motel will be geared to travelers, said David Peck of Davco Construction of Orinda, one three partners in the venture called Carlson Motel Inc. He said the group will be applying for rating from the Automobile Association of America (AAA).

Motels listed in Triple A guidebooks have to meet certain quality and service standards.

He also plans to apply to the city for a permit to install a 40-foot high identification sign easily visible from the freeway to attract travelers. Other plans involve discussions with officials of the Denny's Restaurant chain about the possibility of locating a restaurant on another vacant lot across Carlson from the motel.

The motel is under construction on the corner of Carlson Boulevard and Tehama Avenue. The first building, with 19 units including a manager's apartment, is expected to be completed in six weeks. The developers have a building permit for another 17 units planned for an adjacent vacant lot that Peck said would be under construction in two or three months.

When completed and operating, Peck said, the motel would be valued at $1.2 to $1.5 million.

"One of the reasons we're building the motel is that we've been approached by a lot of people who would like to have a good motel here to put their friends and parents up in, and there isn't one," Peck said.

"We're applying for Triple A rating. We're building it to their specifications, for their approval. They need certain quality standards, such as the quality of beds and bathrooms, and the facilities inside each room."

Richmond Annex neighborhood residents raised questions about the motel at the May 9 City Council meeting. Neighbors said they were astonished to find the building under construction because there had been no public notice.

Assistant City Attorney William Bonnell explained, however, that the commercial zoning on the Carlson Boulevard lot was appropriate for a motel so the developers needed only to secure a building permit.

Because of this project and others that Annex residents object to, the Richmond Annex Neighborhood Council has asked the city to impose stricter zoning controls on their neighborhood through the creation of a controlled development zone that "overlays" the existing zoning.

While the CD zone would not have prevented the motel project, it would have required a certain amount of public review before construction began.

The Planning Commission will hold a hearing on the CD zone July 7.

Among the things that concerns the Annex residents in the fact that another Carlson Boulevard motel a block away, the 40 Flags, advertises adult movies and short term hours. When residents realized the new motel was being built right on the sidewalk so that cars entered from the rear off the side street, and further learned that some of the units would have saunas and spas, they had reservations about the kind of clientele the motel would serve.

Peck, however, says the developers originally planned to put the building on the back of the lot with parking in front. But the second lot they plan to develop, to the west of the existing building, is smaller and without room for parking if the building were on the back of the lot.

So the developers moved the building forward to allow parking in the rear, he said.

"Also, frontage development is very desirable because you don't see all the cars from the street," Peck said. There will be a six-foot high fence across the back to screen the cars from adjacent homes.

Peck said the exterior of the building will be completed within three weeks. "Then everybody will be able to see what it looks like," he said.

Peck invited the neighbors to contact him and to tour the building if they have questions about the developers' plans.

"We've gone to a lot of expense," he said. "These are going to be deluxe units. Our object here is to have a nice building that we can be proud of. I think this will be a service to everybody."

Kanti Patel and Solo Patel are the other two partners in the venture, Peck said.

Victims chase thieves

EL CERRITO — Two burglars who were surprised as they were breaking into a home at Ellerhorst and Barrett Avenue were the targets of several shots as they were chased through the city by the outraged victims.

The pursuit started at Thursday evening when the burglars were spotted. They drove off but were pursued by the two victims who had armed themselves. Several shots were fired as the getaway car careened backwards down both Barrett and San Pablo Avenue before it got turned around.

The pursuers lost sight of the burglars as they sped westbound on Cutting Boulevard near 37th Street.

Loss was estimated at between $10,000 and $15,000.

Albany's pro jockey starts young and wins

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — Mario Cisneros, a 17-year-old senior at Albany's MacGregor High School, doesn't dream of riding a strong beautiful thoroughbred down the home stretch to the roar of fans. He races.

Cisneros, who remembers being on the back of a horse at the age of two or three, debuted at Golden Gate Fields on April 20. One week later, on only his fifth racing start, he chalked up his first career win.

"I knew we would win turning into the stretch," Cisneros said. "I was waiting for someone to pass. No one was going to. I said to myself, 'I'm going to win it.' I couldn't believe it — we did it."

Cisneros' win was on a horse named "Securely," owned by Beeson & Beeson and trained by Leonard Shoemaker.

"I'd galluped the horse quite a bit," the young jockey said. "Last year she came in ninth. We thought she'd be first this year."

Apparently the horse's handicap the previous year was her nervousness: "We started training her with patience; we took our time with her," Cisneros said.

But horse racing is much more than the glamor of the field. For a young jockey it means hard work and hours of training.

Cisneros' days start at 6:30 in the morning. He trains until 9:30. Then he's off to MacGregor for a few hours, only to return to Golden Gate Fields in the afternoon for the races.

Working out the horses is also a work-out for the jockey: "While they're (the horses) are training, you're learning," Cisneros explained.

When Cisneros was much younger he would ride at the ranches of one of two uncles who lived near Red Bluff and in New Mexico. "I used to get on a horse and ride it all day long, rain or shine."

Over the summer of 1979 Cisneros attended the Los Angeles Jockey School, barely qualifying for the school's 12- or 13-year-old minimum. One of only 12 students, he learned to gallup horses, take care of them, their equipment and their stalls.

"Then I messed around for a year, looking at races, watching horses," he said. "I'd go to the races with my dad." That year was to be the last time Cisneros was to sit back and observe.

Cisneros "started working from the bottom," cleaning stalls, walking the horses and riding the ponies which lead the horses on their stretching out activities. He learned to clean the horses' tack (the saddle and bridle). At 16 he was the youngest to work at Golden Gate Fields.

The second year Cisneros began to learn the subtleties of riding in a race. "I started to gallup and gallup and gallup," he said.

While still cleaning tack, the 103-pound youngster began to learn the importance of having a good clock in a jockey's head. He learned how to get down low on a horse, how to change a whip from hand to hand, how to hit a horse properly and how to change the side a horse leads on so that it won't get tired.

"Cisneros is very dedicated," said trainer Shoemaker. "He has a good attitude and gets on with people real well," he said.

According to Shoemaker, during last winter's Bay Meadows season, Cisneros would leave Albany at 5 a.m. to work at the San Mateo track and return later in the day to go to school.

The time pressure of morning training forced the young jockey, who had attended Vista, Cornell and Albany Middle School, to switch from Albany High School to the more flexible MacGregor High.

"Mario is a city boy," Shoemaker said. "His talent surprises me. I told him it might be four or five years before he'd race. He was racing after two-and-a-half years.

"My first race, the first day I rode I was very nervous," Cisneros recalled. He came in a respectable third.

"He's got Bob Hack, the leading jockey's agent," Shoemaker said. "He spotted Mario and came to me to ask to hustle his book...His future is very bright.

Cisneros will have to win five races before he can officially start his apprenticeship. Now, he said, he freelances for various trainers.

Though relatively inexperienced, apprentices have one distinct advantage over accomplished jockeys. The apprentice or "bug" has a five pound handicap in the race for either a full year or 55 wins, which ever comes last.

Unlike some jockeys, Cisneros has no problem keeping his weight down. He said he eats only what he needs "to stay alive."

"He'll never have a weight problem," Shoemaker said. "He's a natural lightweight."

For his April 27 win, Cisneros earned $700 of a $1,100 purse. Customarily the jockey earns 10 percent of the purse, with a specified amount going to the jockey's agent. The balance is distributed mostly between the owner and trainer of the winning horse.

"You get $45 even if you finish dead last," Cisneros said.

The lifelong Albany resident isn't even tempted to supplement his income by betting. "I don't pay attention to betting now, just riding.

Estimating the average age of GGF's jockeys to be around 25, Cisneros knows he's the youngest on the field. "I've got a long career ahead of me," he said.

According to Shoemaker, maturity on the field and the stables is vital: "Mario's only 17, but he acts 21," he said.

"I'd like to run in any of the big races — Santa Anita or Hollywood Park. The big money is there — it's tough (to get in)," Cisneros said.

Young Cisneros' vision of a horse racing career does stop when he may no longer race: "After I retire as a jockey I'd like to be a trainer," he said.

Pot luck with Olga Bier

Moo juice is good for you

Sometimes in my wild daydreams, I see myself cool and poised, beautifully groomed but carefree and casual, saying to the TV camera, "Of course, I drink milk. It's a wonderful drink — and good for you, too."

The funny part of this is that I would probably do this little commercial for free, because I do believe it. I love a glass of cool milk — especially after a bite of artichoke (it makes it taste sweet) or with a banana (makes it taste like a milk shake) or with a sticky peanut butter sandwich (it feels so "clean"). And because I am interested in nutrition and because I tend to believe research which has accummulated over the years and proven itself, I do believe that milk is good for you.

Milk has long enjoyed the title of the "most nearly perfect food" with good reason. In addition to its protein and B vitamin content, it is high in the minerals calcium and phosphorus. It also has many of the lesser known minerals such as zinc, chromium and selenium which researchers are finding more and more valuable in the spectrum of our mineral needs.

An important mineral

As Jane Brody says in her Nutrition Book, "While all the mineral nutrients are essential for life, for several reasons calcium might be said to lead the pack in importance." Although you probably think of your bones as solid, calcium is, in fact, moving in and out of them, she explains. And if your diet contains inadequate amounts of calcium, certain hormones remove some from your bones so that your calcium supply can continue. If your diet is consistently short of calcium, your bones deteriorate. Hence — osteoporosis. Many specialists believe osteoporosis, which afflicts one woman in four after menopause, is largely a result of a long-standing calcium deficiency.

Dr. Robert Recker, chief of endocrinology and metabolism at Creighton University in Omaha, states that "while dietary intake of calcium is not the only influencing factor in osteoporosis, the number of osteoporosis victims will increase 125 percent in the next 50 years unless preventive measures are adopted now by younger adults."

These measures, Dr. Recker feels, are dietary calcium in the form of dairy products for the young, and a calcium supplement in addition to foods high in calcium for post-menopausal women. (Men, apparently, are not quite as subject to this disease because of inherently heavier bone structure.) This all sounds like my old dietary timebomb approach. Those of us who have positions of guidance for the young must continue to prod the kids to get ther calcium.

Dr. Recker also feels that weight-bearing exercise such as walking (better than jogging) should be a regular component of daily activity throughout life because exercise has a beneficial effect on bone mass. It all sounds very rational to me. The main problem I'm having is trying to reconcile the walking with my arthritic joints!

How to do it

Adding milk products to one's diet is not always easy. Some folk have what is called "lactose intolerance" and cannot consume milk as such; some who rely on milk alone to the exclusion of other foods may become anemic since milk has little iron. Some people must be careful to use only fat-free milk (skim) and some sodium-free milk.

An interesting study reported by Brody is one which indicates that yogurt, skim and fermented milk actually lower cholesterol levels. When confronted with so many interesting facts, it's easy to feel justified in including milk in your menus. Of course, not everyone cares for milk as a drink. If you want, however, to add dairy products to your meals, try some of these dressings and sauces. They were developed by the California Milk Advisory Board and are versatile enough for many uses.

Mustard cheese sauce

2 T. butter
3 T. flour
1½ c. milk
3 T. fresh lemon juice
1 T. white wine vinegar
3 T. Dijon-style mustard
½ c. grated Parmesan cheese
¾ t. tarragon
Salt and pepper

Melt butter in saucepan, stir in the flour and mix until smooth. Gradually add milk and cook over low heat until thickened — 3 to 4 minutes. Stir in the remaining ingredients and serve warm.

This is tasty over tender noodles and topped with steamed vegetables such as carrots, green beans, squash, broccoli or beets. Add some cubed cooked chicken or ham for a heartier dish.

For your next potato salad, use this dressing instead of the usual mayonnaise. It's lower in calories and delicious too.

Yogurt dressing

1 c. plain yogurt
2 T. chopped parsley
2 t. Dijon-style mustard
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix and toss your cooked, cubed potatoes in it.

Creamy dill sauce

Combine ⅓ c. cottage cheese and ¼ c. plain yogurt in the electric blender and blend until smooth. Season with ½ t. dill (or herbs of your choice) and you have a nice sauce to top an omelete or to use as a dip for raw vegetables.

Milk facts

- It takes 10 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese.
- California consumes 15 percent of the nation's cheese.
- Californians consume an average of 29 pounds of cheese per person compared to the national average of 17.8 pounds.
- Each dairy cow produces the equivalent of 565 pounds of butter, or 1,000 gallons of ice cream, or 1,200 pounds of cheese, or about 1,390 gallons of milk.
- Californians eat more yogurt per capita than any state in the union.

Astrograph

If your birthday is Wednesday, June 1:
You will move through the ranks more rapidly in the year following your birthday if you consistently add to knowledge pertaining to your chosen field of endeavor. Be a student with a purpose.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Unless you are talking to friends whom you know for certain have your best interests at heart, it would be wise not to reveal confidential information.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Just because someone you know is a glib talker, it doesn't necessarily mean that he or she has the right solution for a problem which is disturbing you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If associates find fault with you today it's not apt to be over the larger issues. It will be trivial things that could hurt your image.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
In order to be productive today, it's important to be logical instead of wishful. Size up conditions with a practical eye.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
In your commercial dealings today, be particularly attentive to small details. Read contracts carefully and look for blemishes or flaws in merchandise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Find more to praise than to criticize in family members today. Picking apart others will disrupt harmony in your household.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Don't let it be said of you today that you are good at giving orders to others, but poor at executing them yourself. Demonstrate rather than demand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Manage your resources prudently today because, if you don't, a number of small extravagances could add up to a shockingly large total.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Awareness for detail is an asset, but be careful today not to let it become an obsession to the point where you put others down for petty infractions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
When conversing with a sensitive friend today, weigh your every word with care. A thoughtless comment could leave a lasting scar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Your tolerance for persons who are stingy or pennypinchers will be at a low ebb today, so try to avoid acquaintances of this kind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Your remarks will be critically evaluated today by individuals who have a degree of influence over your career. Think before speaking.

Wrestler takes meet despite size

Andrew Tate of Salesian, smallest contestant in the National High School Judo Championships last month, upheld Bay Area prestige in the top level competition by capturing the 115 pounds and under championship.

The 14-year-old member of the Salesian Judo Club impressed instructor Mel Augustine of the Albany Judo Club, who has had trophy winners of his own in the national tourney every year since 1977.

"Tate is small but he kept throwing bigger opponents all the way to the finals," related Augustine. "He was matched against an 18-year-old in the finals and scored early to withstand the bigger boy's superior strength—he was a foot taller than Andrew—to win."

Augustine's son, Glen, 165-pounder from Berkeley High School, scored a hard-earned third place. Augustine lost his opening bout to Mike Cunningham from Florida and had to fight his way back from the loser's bracket. Bothered by the high altitude and frequency of matches, Augustine lost to the eventual runnerup from San Jose.

Another Albany Judo Club member, Michael Lee, fought for six rounds in the 135-pound division before being eliminated from his first national tournament. Lee is an Oakland High School student.

The Bay Area contingent suffered a severe setback when Brian Sano, 135-pounder from Kennedy High School, was eliminated at the start of the tournament for a violation.

Garlic lovers: get your best recipes out

While plans for the Berkeley Garlic Festival are beginning to take shape, dates have been announced for Gilroy Garlic Festival which will take place July 29-31.

Entries are now being accepted for the main highlight of the Gilroy festival, the Great Garlic Recipe Contest and Cook-off. Original fresh garlic recipes for the nationwide competition should be sent to the Great Garlic Recipe Contest and Cook-off, Gilroy Garlic Festival, P. O. Box 2311, Gilroy, CA 95020 before July 11. Seven cash prizes and Garlic Lovers' Cookbooks are offered to the winners.

Creators of the top 10 recipes selected by professional home economists will be expected to come, at their own expense, to the cook-off July 30 at Gavilan College in Gilroy where a panel of food experts will taste and judge the dishes. First prize is $200, second $150, and third $100. All finalists receive a copy of the cookbook, a garlic braid, and can attend the other festival activities as honored guests of the community.

Recipes entered must be original and must specify at least three cloves of fresh garlic or the equivalent in dehydrated form. Contestants may enter as many recipes as they wish. Include name, address, phone number and whether the contestant can attend the cook-off.

A favorite feature of the festival itself is "Gourmet Alley" where amateur cooks perform their culinary magic over firepits, turning out garlic-lace delicacies for sale. There will be craft and food booths, performing musicians, thespian troupes, a bicycle race, hot-air balloon rides, and other activities.
